Dear Vice Chancellor/ Director,

I am delighted to extend a warm invitation to you for the upcoming 11th International Conference on Human Values in Higher Education, to be held online from 27–29 November 2026. This conference offers a valuable opportunity to deepen our understanding and practical application of Universal Human Values (UHV) in the field of education.

The theme for this year's conference is: "Transformative Role of Education for Global Peace and Harmony."

- Conference Website and Registration Link: https://ichvhe.uhv.org.in
- Registration Fee: None (the conference is offered as a gift by over 30 organising partners

The conference aims to bring together educators, policymakers, researchers, and thought leaders from around the world to exchange ideas, experiences, research, and best practices in promoting value-based education. It will focus on a well-tested UHV model of holistic, value-based education, which has the potential to prepare skilled and responsible graduates with a humane world vision. Such graduates would be committed to continuous self-development, capable of understanding and addressing the root causes of problems, and able to contribute meaningfully to their families, workplaces, society, national development, nature, and the international community.

I am happy to share the significant progress made in mainstreaming UHV in education, including the preparation of over 90,000 faculty members to teach UHV, its curricular integration in more than 240 universities, and the participation of 7–9 lakh students annually. These and other achievements are outlined in the addendum below.

This is the 11th conference in the series organised by the UHV team. Last year's conference attracted 3,155 delegates from 27 countries. This year, it has already received 2,698 registrations from 44 countries.

To help promote the conference, it would be grateful if you would consider forwarding a copy of this letter to heads of foreign universities and institutions in your contact too. The need for inculcating human values through education has become urgent today globally. Many institutions are already making tremendous efforts in this direction and we all can connect with each other.

ADDENDUM

About the Conference and Progress in UHV Implementation

Conference Objectives

The conference aims to bring together educators, policymakers, researchers, and thought leaders from around the world to share experiences, research, and best practices in holistic, value-based education.

Particular emphasis will be placed on the transformative role of education in developing responsible global citizens committed to peace, harmony, and the vision of a world family.

Progress in Mainstreaming UHV

Through collective efforts, significant progress has been made in sensitising education policymakers, developing teaching-learning materials, building a strong UHV team, and integrating UHV into academic curricula.

Some key achievements are:

- Faculty Development: More than one lakh faculty members have participated in intensive UHV workshops, and over 90,000 have been prepared to teach UHV.
- Curricular Integration: Over 240 universities are integrating UHV into their academic curricula, preparing faculty, and conducting UHV courses in an organised manner.
- Student Participation: Approximately 7–9 lakh students annually are participating in UHV programmes through efforts involving more than 4,000 institutions across 39 states/UTs.
- School Education: UHV-based programmes are also being conducted in 3,000 schools in Madhya Pradesh.
- Institutional Support: 71 UHV Nodal and Potential Nodal Centres were recognised by AICTE at the March 2026 VC Conclave.

AICTE has been a crucial and active partner in this progress, providing sustained support for the mainstreaming of UHV in education.

International Participation

This is the 11th conference in the series organised by the UHV team.

- 2025 Conference: 3,155 delegates from 27 countries.
- 2026 Conference: 2,698 registrations from 44 countries received so far.

The growing international participation reflects increasing interest in holistic, value-based education and its potential contribution to global peace and harmony.

Conference Organisation

The conference is organised collectively by institutional partners and hosted by one of them each year.

AICTE has been our National sponsor for the last 2 conferences. This year, Ajay Kumar Garg Engineering College, Ghaziabad, is hosting the conference, with 30 institutions, including one from Bhutan, participating as Organising Partners.

The conference has always been offered without any registration fee, as a contribution to making holistic, value-based education accessible to educators worldwide.
